

Xu Wang is an Associate Professor in the School of Software, Beihang University. He received the B.Eng. and Ph.D. degree in computer science from Beihang University in 2008 and 2015, respectively. He also worked as a visit scholar from 2016 to 2017 in the department of computer science, University of Chicago. His research interests focus on how to improve software development efficiency and software quality through AI techniques, program analysis and algorithm optimization. Xu Wang hosted or joined several projects sponsored by National Natural Science Foundation of China, China 863 and 973 programs, National Key Research and Development Program of China. His work about intelligent software development toolkit, software resource recommendation, cloud-based software development has been used in large software companies. He has published 40+ papers in the conferences and journals such as ICSE, ASPLOS, ASE, DSN, and served as a PC member or reviewer in many international conferences and journals.